Trieste Città della Conoscenza

@tsconoscenza

The universities, research and higher education institutions in the province of Trieste make this area one of the locations with the highest number of working units employed in the research sector in all of Europe. The Memorandum of Understanding between the Municipality of Trieste, the local Universities and Research Institutions dates back to 2007: an active Collaboration Network joining local authorities, scientific and research institutions located in Trieste, in order to foster dialogue among its players.

The city of Trieste and its surrounding territory comprise an area with the highest development potential that aims to become a European reference point, to attract an increasingly higher number of international students and researchers, to develop tangible interactions with the business world, thereby achieving a positive spin-off on the local society and economy.

This Network - which identifies itself in the name Trieste City of Knowledge - operates in order to provide functional responses to the objectives outlined above, developing the relations between the local territory and its scientific excellence.

University of Trieste

@UniTrieste @universitatrieste
@UniTwitTs @divulgazioneunits

Founded in 1924, the University of Trieste is a medium-sized university with a student population of approximately 16,000. It offers a wide range of degree programmes at bachelor, master and doctoral level, as well as short vocational masters, advanced masters and specialisation programmes, most of which are in the medical area. Some degree programmes are taught in English.

The university currently has 10 departments: Economic, Business, Mathematical and Statistical Sciences; Engineering and Architecture; Humanities; Legal, Language, Interpreting and Translation Studies; Mathematics and Geosciences; Medicine, Surgery and Health Sciences; Life Sciences; Pharmaceutical and Chemical Sciences; Physics; Political and Social Sciences.

The university participates in many research projects at national and international level. It is also involved in various student and staff exchange programmes with universities in the EU and collaborates with several universities from Eastern Europe and other non-EU countries.

International Society for the Study of Work and Organisational Values

ISSWOV aims to advance the study of work and organizational values and related aspects of the organization; to encourage the exchange of ideas and interaction among scholars engaged in these topics; to collect, generate, preserve, decipher, and disseminate data and information relating to work and organizational values, and to encourage and initiate publications concerning research on these themes.

Call for Papers ISSWOV 2018

Organization 4.1:

The Role of Values in the Organizations of the 21st Century

Nowadays, 4.0 stands for the new means of the information and knowledge storage and transfer – like Big Data, Internet of Things, Internet of Services; new concepts and life style like Economies of sharing, co-working spaces, self-organized working teams, HR systems built around competences instead of job descriptions, etc. We already have entered the new era of networks, transparency, mobility, uncertainty, velocity multitasking and diffusion of private and public spheres. How should we live with it? It is proven that human brain was not built for multitasking and constant attention distractions. In times when knowledge is the main commodity many facts are counter intuitive – there are almost no linear relations in social sciences and normal distribution statistics are not working properly to explain wealth variation or start up growth. Those tens of thousands of years in which human brain has developed until now were much different from what we are experiencing in the last decade, which imposes enormous number of research questions in all fields of science.

On the other hand, although means of communication are changing along with our physical environment and electronic or nano or whatever devices we use, the human nature and basic assumptions are intact. Or are they? Basic virtues needed for happy life stated in Nicomachean Ethics by Aristotle do sound up to date like never before. Many newest management theories are based on well known, old statements dated back to antient times.

Futurists are proposing that at least half of professions will disappear in the next 50 years due to the new technologies. All routine works will be done by robots, so human will be able to do the fun part, being creative and inspirational. Are we ready to it? When social networks make people and organizations so visible to the public, when workforce becomes too educated to take for granted many organizational values that were not questioned before, when basic function of universities as knowledge centres has switched to entrepreneurship and innovation boosters, how should we address those changes?

All previous ISSWOV conferences were devoted to actual topics related to organizational science and forthcoming conference at the University of Trieste is continuing this tradition. We encourage scholars to submit papers on a wide range of topics, from the micro level of individual work to the macro level of societal organisation. As in the previous conferences the main sub-topics are related (but not limited to) ethics, leadership, work-family conflict, cross-cultural perspectives, motivation, human resource management, diversity management, corporate governance, and organizational culture.

Moreover, this time we will be happy to welcome topics on issues that have recently gained major public and academic interest, such as artificial intelligence, behavioural economics, big data, refugee integration, management of creative and knowledge professionals, corporate governance, future of organizational structures and other “hot topics” connected to organizational studies.

Full papers will be published in a book by ISSWOV and will soon be available online.

Keynote speakers

Simon L. Dolan

Global Future of Work Foundation (GFWF)

Simon Dolan has received his PhD from the University of Minnesota. He has worked for over 22 years at the Universities of Montreal and McGill (in Canada) and for the past 12 years he is the ESADE Future of Work Chair. He wrote more than 65 books in various languages in the fields of management, cross cultural psychology, coaching and wellbeing. He was also the Editor in chief of Cross Cultural Management (until 2015), and altogether has published over 160 papers in scholarly and scientific journals. In addition to academic work, Simon Dolan is the founder and president of Gestion M.D.S. Inc, a management consulting firm based in Montreal-Canada.

Leading by Values: Revisiting and Proposing a New Set of Competences for Succeeding in the New Landscape of Work

The talk will synthesize recent research and publications of Prof. Dolan on the future of Work. A 3 years study by a consortium of 10 Universities, conducted for the EU commission ("Sustainable lifestyle in Europe in the year 2050"), concluded that: "Neither the vast majority of companies, nor their employees, and even the Universities, in Europe understand the dramatic shifts that are being unfolded in the new landscape that is called "work"; 90% of them are ill or not prepared".

The presentation will include some Macro and Micro forces that affect transformation in the future; the three principal drivers of change/transformation are Digitalization-Virtualization, Globalization and Creativity. From there, an examination of the new role of leaders as transformation agents along with their new key roles in reengineering a more empowering culture in the organization will follow. The presentation will include scenarios on the future of work (and organizations) and will explore new paradigms in managing and leading people.

Simona Mihai Yiannaki

European University Cyprus

Simona Mihai-Yiannaki is an Associate Professor in Finance, Department Vice Chair- Department of Accounting, Economics and Finance at Ioannis Gregoriou School of Business and Coordinator Business Development - International Office at European University Cyprus. Her industry track record is in international banking and finance with banks headquartered in Romania, Austria, Poland, Greece, Turkey and Cyprus. She was a Fulbright finalist and a coordinator and a member of several international, European and World Bank projects. Her academic research areas are Banking and Financial Services Innovation, Corporate Governance, Mergers and Acquisitions, Risk Management applications for banks and SMEs, Creativity and Innovation, Entrepreneurship, Distance Learning in higher education.

Workplace Changes Under a Digital Globalized Era

When it comes to workplace creativity and innovation, Simona brings in her experience not only as a former banker, but also as an academic and an entrepreneurs' trainer. Her presentation is focused on several industries where she has experienced vast changes such as banking, academia and start-ups.

Her presentation demonstrates the relational loop among these three areas and reveal how they have influenced each other while making use of Artificial Intelligence (AI), automation and digitization for increasing investors' value.

Part of her analysis touches on efficiency, productivity, research and development, flexibility, mobility, staffing and change management.

However, her speech is more focused on the fact that most challenges would spring from empowering digital leadership in the quest for digital transformation of the workplace, while bringing visionary solutions to potential industry disruptors.

Tauno Kekäle

Vaasa University of Applied Sciences

Tauno Kekäle has spent his academic career evenly as President (8 years), professor in Industrial Management (8 years) and other University education and research matters (likewise, 8 years). His main research interests have covered quality and innovation management issues. Before his university career, he used to sell all kinds of things.

Will quality survive in Organisation 4.0?

Some thinkers state that a worldwide 4th Industrial Revolution is now taking place. This revolution should arise from an exponential increase of digitalisation (driven also by new items such as e.g. Artificial Intelligence, Internet of Things). The presentation concentrates on some potential effects of these changes for manufacturing and services and discusses in this light the issue of quality and some related managerial activities.

Social Activities

1 July 2018

Welcome Reception

7:00pm | Caffè degli Specchi | Piazza dell'Unità d'Italia, 7

2 July 2018

Trieste Experience

6:30 – 8:00pm | InfoPoint | Piazza dell'Unità d'Italia

During 18th century the small town of Trieste evolved until it became, in the next century, the first port and the fifth city of the Austro-Hungarian Empire. The social and economic development was determined not only by the Hapsburg economic policies but also by the religious tolerance the newcomers could rely on. The freedom and privileges granted made significant groups come to Trieste, including Armenians, Serbs, Greeks, Jews, Protestants etc., which contributed to the city growth thanks to their commercial networks.

The visit to the city centre aims to reconstruct the history of the port town and its development through some of its historical monuments and remarkable places. It also wants to underline that the religious freedom was guaranteed for all the different communities, which could build their places of worship right in the city centre.

Social Dinner

8:30pm | Trattoria Caprese | Piazza della Borsa 15, Trieste

3 July 2018

Gala Dinner

8:30pm | Pier | Molo Venezia 1, Trieste

4 July 2018

Miramare Experience

2:00 – 8:00pm | InfoPoint | Piazza Unità d'Italia

Explore the city's highlights from the sea with a half-day trip to Miramare Castle, located about 8 km north-west of Trieste. We will catch the public sea transport (Delfino verde) from riva Nazario Sauro/Molo Bersaglieri to Grignano.

During the boat trip - lasting about 40 minutes -, we will have a nice outlook on the old dismissed harbor and the coast of the Gulf. We will be approaching the Miramare Castle from the Miramare Castle Park, that is a suggestive national natural reserve with various tropical species of trees and plants. With a 10-minute walk we will reach the precious inside of Miramare Castle, commissioned by archduke Ferdinand Maximilian of Hapsburg (1832-1868), designed in 1856 by the Austrian architect Carl Junker and finished in 1860: some rooms of the Miramare Castle maintained their original unique furniture, while those habited by Duke Amedeo of Savoy-Aosta were renovated in a rationalist style (1931-1943).

The beauty of the location combined with its legend make the atmosphere of the Castle unique!

5 July 2018

Jewish Trieste

9:00-11am | InfoPoint | Piazza dell'Unità d'Italia

The visit to the city centre will start with a tour of symbolic places of Jewish presence and persecution in Trieste: Piazza Unità d'Italia, where Mussolini, on 18th september 1938, announced fascist racial laws; the first Stolpersteinen - placed in front of Marcheria family, which suffered the deportation to the Nazis death camps - to conclude with what remains of the old town ghetto.

The second part will be dedicated to the visit of the Museum of the Jewish Community of Trieste "Carlo and Vera Wagner". The museum is located in a two floors building that holds particular historical significance for the Jewish Community in Trieste, and which has been declared a site of national interest. It was previously a Jewish hospital; in the first decades of the twentieth century Via del Monte 5-7 hosted the local Jewish Agency which helped refugees fleeing Nazism as they left Trieste for Palestine and the Americas. On this site, an Ashkenazi oratory remained in use until 1987: this remains part of the Museum's structure. In 2014-15, the Jewish Community in Trieste undertook a complete refurbishment of the Museum. There were two main goals: to promote its rich array of artifacts, which in quality and quantity are amongst the most important in Italy, and which provide a unique insight into the Jewish life in Friuli Venezia Giulia; and to ensure that the exhibition is as informative and engaging as possible for visitors, from within Italy and from further afield - thanks to the English translation of all the texts - with particular attention to schools. The artifacts held by the Museum include the Triestine Jewish Community's collection of Judaica, including ritual objects of art which were collected after the inauguration of the Tempio Maggiore in Piazza Giotti, following the closure of the four Synagogues (scole). The collections are composed of silver items (particularly precious are the 18th century pieces made in Venice); fabrics; documents and books which record both the public and familial dimensions of Jewish life. Amongst the former owners and donors of these objects - the oldest being a Sefer breastplate engraved with gothic figures, which dates back to 1593 - we find echoes of the great families of Triestine Jews who played leading roles in the city's history. This Museum also holds several historical documents of great significance, including a ledger of the mid-17th century and the Diplomas granted in 1771 by the Empress Maria Teresa of Habsburg. There is also material relating to the history and memory of the Triestine Jews deported to extermination camps during the Holocaust. There is a moving collection of personal objects taken by the Nazis. Hidden inside jute sacks, these belongings were discovered by the Allies and sent to Rome, where they were forgotten for decades in the basement of the Ministry of Treasury. In 2000 these items were returned to the Jewish Community of Trieste, which decided to display a number of the objects in this Museum, and to donate a small but significant selection to the Civic Museum of the Risiera di San Sabba and the Yad Vashem Museum in Jerusalem.

About Mis-Mas

OUR CONFERENCE GADGETS

Dear colleagues and dear friends,

I am more than happy to share with you the idea behind this year conference bags, cases and badges.

Let's start from the beginning. Each of us has travelled and participated in International Conferences around the world. Each time we attend this kind of events, we are usually given something as a gift. The idea is to provide us with something that hopefully will remind us of the experience we are about to live. If we are lucky, we get a fancy bag. In the bag, there is a pen, a notebook, the conference programme, some maps, our badge. Sometimes we like the bag we are given and, once we are back home, we use it; sometimes, we don't and the bag is soon forgotten in our closets. Usually, the bag is made of canvas; sometimes it is made of fabric; often, we don't even know which material the gadget is made of.

When I first started the organisation of the conference, one year ago, I realised I was the first not to care so much about all these gadgets related issues. I also realized I didn't know where all my conference bags came from, what was the story behind the gadget I had taken home, which organizational values led the conference organisers choosing that particular bag instead of another. Neither could I tell if the choice was intentionally made to adhere to and be consistent with the values of the organization. And it makes sense, we all know that the planning of a conference requires a lot of energy and conference gadgets are not what we call a priority.

However – second chapter of our story –, soon after the very beginning of the conference organization, while attending a public event, I bumped into a series of colourful products that my own organization, the University of Trieste, had created in partnership with a small local social tailor's shop. The series was so nice, I wanted to know more. I took my moped and drove to the laboratory. The story I was told was worth listening to. The Mis-Mas series is realized by recycling PVC banners the University of Trieste uses during its scientific and public events. Mis-Mas are created by Lister sartoria sociale in partnership with the University's Science Dissemination Office. The goal both Lister and the Office share is to recover materials otherwise destined to the shredder, reinventing them into new and creative objects. In the small laboratory, old objects and clothes (banners, umbrellas, jeans...) are de-structured and recomposed, using both new and traditional techniques. The idea behind this colourful, unpredictable, and surprising series is hodgepodge, assembly, jumble – and this is what Mis-Mas means in the local “triestine” dialect.

There is another aspect both Lister and the University Office share: the place where they are situated, San Giovanni Park. For those of you coming from faraway, this name might not mean a lot, but for those familiar with the story of psychiatry and for the local and national population too, San Giovanni Park is history. Once the site of Trieste Provincial Psychiatric Hospital, it is in this park that, in the 1970s, Franco Basaglia and his co-workers revolutionised the field of psychiatry: the patients were finally free to leave, and the city's residents were free to enter. Now the park hosts institutions, social cooperatives, and various associations. It is in this place that the partnership between the Office and Lister was born, in this wonderful open garden, where to experiment new kinds of social enterprises, welfare and creative activities, cultural events, education and research is always possible.

Most stories have a beginning, a body, and an end. Let me conclude with a final chapter. Why Mis-Mas? Well, the answer is implied by the story I've just told you, but, to make the moral explicit, there are many different reasons that have led me to choose the Mis-Mas series for our ISSWOV 2018 conference.

First of all, the organizational values this choice implies: Mis-Mas are made of recycled materials and they are made by a social tailor's shop where health and social services work every day in order to individuate and propose new ethical possibilities in the field of work. Moreover, this particular series is created in partnership with my own organization. So, shared values are the first reason leading my choice. The second reason is innovation: Lister creates new objects out of old ones, and it does so using both new and traditional techniques. In addition to this, I particularly liked the idea of using for the conference something coming from a local cooperation between a small social enterprise and a university. Then, I was interested in the beauty of the product and I imagined ISSWOV participants liking these colourful bags and cases. Last but not least, I was – and still am – firmly convinced that big organizations can only but benefit from endorsing such projects. Shared values, social relations, innovation and an ethical choice are the keywords of what is behind this year conference gadgets.

Both Lister and the University Office were more than happy to provide us with the Mis-Mas series. To the original series, an additional tag was inserted ad hoc for the conference. Moreover, they created a new design for the cases, replicating the look and the bright pink colour we have chosen for ISSWOV 2018. The badge has also been created by Lister for the occasion.

Coming to the very end of this informal letter, I hope you will enjoy our gadgets and understand the shared value on which they are based. End of the story – thank you for reading it with me.

Best Regards

Sara Cervai

How to Communicate, Organise, and Manage an International Conference

#comunicazione #organizzazione #gestione di un convegno internazionale

On the occasion of the conference, the Humanities Department (Dipartimento di Studi Umanistici) of the University of Trieste has launched a collaboration with the Liceo Dante Alighieri (Trieste). 18 students attending the local high school have been trained on how to organise an international conference.

The experience was particularly focused on all issues concerning communication, both institutional and social media communication. Students have worked with experts in both fields. They have also been trained to welcome conference participants and to manage possible difficult situations during the four days event. The aim of the collaboration is to show students how complex the organisation of events of the like is; to give them an overview of the different expertise that are at stake in such an organisation; and to engage them in the conference organisation itself.

Do not hesitate to ask them for help: they will have a pink T-Shirt and be happy to help you!
